

The Johns Hopkins Alzheimer's Disease Resource Center for Minority Aging Research (JHAD-RCMAR) – funded by the National Institute on Aging (NIA)

Request for Pilot Research Proposals

The JHAD-RCMAR announces the availability of funding for 3 pilot projects on:

ALZHEIMER'S DISEASE AND RELATED DISORDERS IN MINORITY AGING FROM A BASIC SCIENCE, CLINICAL, PSYCHOSOCIAL, OR HEALTH SERVICES PERSPECTIVE

JHAD-RCMAR funds are available to encourage innovative, multi-disciplinary research focused on basic, clinical, psychosocial, or health services aspects of minority aging, Alzheimer's disease or related disorders (ADRD), and health disparities. The overarching goal of the JHAD-RCMAR is to prepare the next generation of underrepresented minority researchers in the conduct of Alzheimer-related research that is culturally relevant and has potential to bridge research from discovery to implementation in ADRD minority aging. Those awarded pilot research funds through this mechanism will become JHAD-RCMAR Scientists and will receive additional career development support through the JHAD-RCMAR.

- Funds available: $30,000 (direct costs), plus F&A are available for each pilot. Each pilot project is expected to last one year.
- Eligibility: junior or senior investigators, or post-doctoral fellows who are on track for promotion to at least Research Associate by July 1, 2019. For the post-doctoral fellows, we request a letter from a mentor confirming the promotional track. The affiliation of the applicant can be from any University. This pilot program is not limited to those with Johns Hopkins University affiliations
